The Burial of Moses.

"And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor; but no man knoweth of his sepulcher to this day."—Deut. 34:vi.

Be Nebo's lonely mountain,
On this side Jordan's wave,
In a vale in the land of Moab,
There lies a lonely grave;
But no man dug that sepulcher,
And no man saw it e'er,
For the angels of God upturned the sod,
And laid the dead man there.

That was the grandest funeral
That ever passed on earth;
But no man heard the trumping,
Or saw the train go forth;
Noiselessly as the day-light
Comes when the night is done,
And the crimson streak on ocean's cheek
Grows into the great sun,

Noiselessly as the spring time
Her crown of verdure waves,
And all the tree on all the hills
Open their thousand leaves,
So, without sound of music
Or voice of them that wept,
Silently down from the mountain crown
The great procession swept.

Perchance the bald old eagle,
On gray Beth-peor's heights,
Out of his rocky eyrie,
Looked on the wondrous sight;
Perchance the lion, stalking,
Still shuns the hallowed spot;
For beast and bird have seen and heard
That which man knoweth not.

So when the warrior dieth,
His comrades in the war,
With arms reversed and muffled drum,
Follow the funeral car.
They show the banners taken,
They tell his battles won,
And after him lead his masterless stood,
While peals the minute gun.

Amid the nobles of the land,
Men lay the sage to rest,
And give the bard an honored place,
With costly marble dressed.
In the great minster transept,
Where lights like glories fall
And the choirs and the organ rings
Along the emblazoned wall.

This was the bravest warrior
That ever buckled sword;
This the most gifted poet
That ever breathed a word;
And never earth's philosopher
Trailed, with his golden pen,
On the deathless page, truths half so sage
As he wrote down for men.

And had he not his honors?
The hill side for his pall;
To lie in state while angels wait
With stars for tapers tall;
And the dark rock pines, like tossing
plumes,
Over his bier to wave;
And God's own hand in that lonely land
To lay him in the grave.

In that deep grave, without a name,
Whence his uncoffined clay
Shall break again—oh, wondrous thought—
Before the judgment day.
And stand with glory wrapped around
On the hills he never trod,
And speak of the strife that won our life
With the incarnate Son of God.

Oh, lonely tomb in Moab's land,
Oh, dark Beth-peor's hill,
Speak to these curious hearts of ours,
And teach them to be still.
God bath His mysteries of grace,
Ways that we cannot tell;
He hides them deep, like the secret sleep
Of Him he loved so well.

—Mrs. Alexander.

LOOKING FOR A HOUSE.

"I give it up!" said Mrs. Carmichael, in despair.

Now it was neither riddle nor conundrum which this young American house-keeper was "giving up." The expression was merely an index to the despair of her inmost soul!

She had been house-hunting all day, all the week, all the month—in fact, ever since the stony-hearted landlord raised the rent of the desirable family mansion which they already inhabited twenty-five per cent., and made it an inevitable necessity to move—and she could find no home for the sole of her foot.

"And what's to become of us, I'm sure I don't know," said Mrs. Carmichael. "For we can't stay here, and we can't live under an umbrella in a field, and in this climate caves and wigwags are entirely out of the question." "That's nonsense, my dear," said Mr. Carmichael. "As if there weren't plenty of houses to be had!"

"Then go and try yourself," said his wife, with spirit.

"I've got my business to attend to," said Mr. Carmichael. "We are always particularly busy in the spring of the year with our wholesale orders. Why can't John go?"

"John?" repeated Mrs. Carmichael. "Yes, John," said her husband.

"I never thought of that," said Mrs. Carmichael.

"It's not so bad a suggestion," said Carmichael. "John isn't such a slave to business as I am, and—"

"But what does John know about a house?" exclaimed the young wife, piteously.

"My dear child," said Mr. Carmichael, in a patronizing sort of way, "to hear you talk, one would imagine that house-hunting was a science, and required a college course. John isn't a fool. Tell him what you want, and how much you can afford to pay, and that will be all that is necessary."

So it came to pass that Mr. Barton—Mrs. Carmichael's brother—who was an enterprising young lawyer, found himself burdened with the weighty responsibility of the family house-hunting.

"A fine idea!" said Mr. Barton. "I might as well be a married man and done with it."

"Dear John, do oblige me!" coaxed his sister. "I'm sure you won't mind a little time and trouble; and I'm clean tired out, with the baby's teething and little Sammy's neuralgia in the face."

"Very well," said Mr. Barton, pursing his lips up into whistling shape. "I'll take some sort of a house, or I'll know the reason why. And if you're not suited with it, don't blame me."

And he commenced the next day in good earnest, armed with a list of houses which might apparently content a dozen families.

The very first house was a pretty little Philadelphia-brick mansion, on a side street, with a window full of hyacinths, and a sewing-machine singing away in the sitting-room.

Mrs. Blake was making some pink frocks for her baby, and her friend Miss Daffodil was sitting with her, in a dis- habille of work-apron and crimping-pins—a pretty, blue-eyed girl, with a thin figure and a gingham suit, bordered with "rick-rack" tape.

"There's the bell!" said Mrs. Blake as she flung the fifth pink frock into her friend's lap, to be duly finished with button-holes and buttons.

"Who can it be at this time of the morning?" said Miss Daffodil, with a terrified glance at the mirror.

"Oh, a house-hunter, I suppose!" said Mrs. Blake, in accents of disgust.

"Please, ma'am," said Norah, appearing at this juncture, "a gentleman to see the house."

Miss Daffodil jumped up and fled precipitately into the closet.

"Don't open this door, Maria, whatever you do!" said she, in a tragic whisper.

"Do not be afraid, dear," said Mrs. Blake.

The next minute Mr. Barton was shown into the room.

"Sorry to disturb you, madam," said he, pleasantly, "but I was looking for an eligible house, and the agent has put this one on my list."

"You are looking for yourself?" said Mrs. Blake, a little dubiously.

"Of course," said Mr. Barton, who had been effectually "posted" by his sister. "Our family is small—only two children—and we're quite particular about a light basement, good plumbing, and water-tight roofs."

"Good gracious!" said Miss Daffodil, among the tea-cups and saucers, "if it is John Barton. The base deceiver! to let us all suppose he was an unmarried man!" and the rosy color mantled to the very crimping-pins as she remembered how she had let John Barton kiss her at the last picnic, when nobody was looking.

"I suppose," said he, all unconscious of the pretty prisoner in the china-closet, "that I'd better write down a list of the rooms and things."

"Yes," said Mrs. Blake, "and then your wife can come and look for herself. For of course a gentleman can't be expected to understand all about these little household conveniences."

"Oh, of course not," said Mr. Barton. ("The deep-dyed villain!" thought Miss Daffodil, hysterically clasping her hands.)

And the two left the room.

Miss Daffodil could hear them overhead, on the stairs, passing through the hall, and finally the front door closed with a reverberating sound, and Mrs. Blake came back to the sewing machine and pink cambric-frocks.

Miss Daffodil had by this time emerged from her prison-cell and stood at the window.

"What a very pleasant young gentleman!" said Mrs. Blake.

"He is a miscreant!" cried Miss Daffodil, whirling around, like an opera dancer, on one foot.

"Why, Jenny, what's the matter?" said Mrs. Blake, in amazement.

"He has been making love to me at church sociables and picnics for three months!" cried Miss Daffodil. "and now he turns out to be a m—m—married man! Oh, dear, oh, dear! is there any limit to the baseness of man?"

And Jenny Daffodil flung herself, sobbing, on her friend's shoulder.

"Don't cry, dear!" said Mrs. Blake. "Perhaps he didn't mean anything. Men will flirt, you know."

"But he told me he loved me."

"Dear, dear!" said Mrs. Blake.

"And he asked me to marry him."

"I never heard anything like it in all my life!" said Mrs. Blake.

"And he gave me a ring with a little tiny spark of a diamond in it," added Miss Daffodil.

"Send it back, my dear," said Mrs. Blake, "at once!"

Mr. John Barton could hardly credit the evidence of his senses the next morning when the postman handed him the mysterious sealed packet which contained the little engagement ring.

"What on earth can have happened?" he asked himself.

Instinctively he turned to his sister for consolation; but Mrs. Carmichael had just gone to complete the bargain for the little Philadelphia-brick house on Merrimac street.

Miss Daffodil didn't go into the china-closet this time; she only retired behind the window-curtains.

She was determined to see what John Barton's wife was like; and Mrs. Blake drew herself up as dimpled little Mrs. Carmichael was shown into the apartment.

"You are the lady whose husband called yesterday," said she—"by the name of—Barton?"

"Not my husband," said Mrs. Carmichael—"only my brother. Barton is the name—it's quite correct; but mine is Carmichael."

"Ah, indeed!" said Mrs. Blake.

"And when may we expect his wife to call?"

Mrs. Carmichael laughed.

"He hasn't got any wife," said she. "He's an old bachelor."

"What!" said Jenny Daffodil, be- lieving her curtains.

"Did he say he was married?" said Mrs. Carmichael.

"Well, since you ask me the ques- tion," confessed Mrs. Blake, "I don't remember that he did say so in so many words. But I somehow took it for granted."

"He's engaged to a very sweet young lady," said Mrs. Carmichael. "A Miss Daffodil, whom I have never seen. But just at present he is an old bachelor. And—"

"What geese we have both been!" cried Mrs. Blake. "Jenny, come out here this minute! Kiss your sister-in-law that is to be. We have jumped at a conclusion without any premises, and now we must jump back again."

So the matter was settled. Miss Daffodil received the diamond ring back again, and every one was happy—Miss Daffodil in her lover, Mr. Barton in the prospect of a speedy marriage, and Mrs. Carmichael in the eligible house which her brother had secured for her occupancy.

"But if I live to be a hundred years old," says Mr. John Barton, "I'll never go house-hunting again. It's a great deal too risky!"

Ears.

Large ears can hear things in general, and denote broad, comprehensive views and modes of thought, while small ears hear things in particular, showing a disposition to individualize, often accom- panied by love of the minute. Large ears are usually satisfied with learning the facts of the case, the general prin- ciples involved—too strict an attention to the enumeration of details, especially all repetition of the more unimportant, is wearisome to them. People with such ears like generally, and are usu- ally well fitted to conduct large enter- prises, to receive and pay out large sums; in buying or selling would prefer to leave a margin rather than reduce the quantity of any sort to the exact dimen- sions of the measure specified, and in giving would prefer to give with free hand and without too strict a calcula- tion as to the exact amount. Small ears, on the contrary, desire to know the particulars of a story as well as the main facts; take delight often in exam- ing, handling or constructing tiny spec- imens of workmanship; are disposed to be exact with respect to inches and ounces in buying or selling, to the ex- tent, at least, of knowing the exact number over or under the stated meas- ure given or received. People with such ears would in most cases prefer a retail to a wholesale business.—Phren- ological Journal.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

The highest percentage of Presby- terian communicants to the population of thirteen leading cities in this country is four per cent. This is in Rochester. The following shows the strength of the Presbyterian church in the cities referred to: San Francisco, 2,001; Cin- cinnati, 3,787; Cleveland, 3,131; In- dianapolis, 2,644; Pittsburgh, 3,965; Newark, N. J., 4,183; Chicago, 4,936; St. Louis, 2,630; Philadelphia, 23,090; Brooklyn, 10,093; New York, 18,359; Rochester, 3,671; Louisville, 2,790.

The special correspondent of the London Times thinks that the number of persons killed by the Scio earth- quake does not greatly, if at all, ex- ceed 4,000, and that this is possibly too large. In the southern half of the island scarcely a house remains in a habitable condition, so that a popu- lation of nearly 50,000 persons is camping out in the open air. Throughout the northern portion of the island the re- peated shocks wrenched the houses and frightened the inmates without doing them any serious bodily harm, except in a very few instances.

A British parliamentary return has been issued of cases of evictions which have come to the knowledge of the con- stabulary in each of the years from 1849 to 1880. In 1849 90,440 persons were evicted, of whom 18,375 were read- mitted. In 1850 the evictions rose to 104,163, and the readmissions to 30,292. Since that period the numbers rapidly fell till in 1860 they only amounted to 2,085. They, however, again increased, and in 1864 9,201 persons were evicted. There was again a falling off, and in 1869 the lowest number was reached. Since then there has been a gradual in- crease, and in 1879 the figures stood at 6,239, and in 1880 at 10,457, the read- missions being 663 and 1,021 respect- ively. The totals from 1849 to 1880 are: Evicted, 90,107 families, 460,570 per- sons; readmitted, 21,340 families, 115,359 persons.

Young women who are contemplating elopement—and undoubtedly there are a great number of them—should reflect a little upon the troubles which came to a New York girl who adopted this romantic way of getting married. She got desperately in love with a beautiful mustache and a handsome diamond pin with a young man attachment, and made arrangements to marry him. As her father, however, did not fall in love with the beautiful things that had fas- cinated her, she was compelled to elope. That was five or six months ago. The mustache and the diamond pin are just as handsome as they ever were, but the young man attachment has since aban- doned the young woman and caned her father in a most outrageous way. She is satisfied that another time she will try a less romantic way of getting mar- ried.

The use of the electric light on ocean steamers is one of the most valuable to which the new method of illumination can be put; and the public will be glad to know that the experiment, as tried on the City of Richmond on her last voyage from Queenstown to New York, was a perfect success. It was not alone in replacing the dim oil lamps in the main saloon that the electric light proved valuable and useful, but in fur- nishing illumination for dark and com- paratively inaccessible places, where it is dangerous to carry an open lamp, and where very little can be seen with any of the ordinary styles of open lamp. The Detroit Free Press believes the lake steamers will have to follow in the wake of the ocean steamers, and when all these and the railway tunnels—per- haps the cars as well—are fully illu- minated the traveling public will begin to realize how great a blessing the electric light is.

What truth there may be in an item running its course in the French prints no one can say, but it is said that in the leading banking houses in Europe what is called a detective camera is to be used. A man of suspicious appearance makes his way up to the cashier's coun- ter and presents a letter of credit or a draft. The clerk, when the man's face is full front toward him, touches a little button. Presto, a concealed camera is brought into play, the sensitive plate is exposed, and in an instant the man's photograph is taken. Further than this, this wonderful detective camera is to play another role. The head of the house leaves his business and con- fides it to his clerks. Some of the clerks go to sleep, or smoke cigars, or skylark, or do other things not exactly in keeping with their calling, and off starts a series of plates, worked by clock-work, and every action of the clerks during a series of hours is re- corded. There might be even a pleas- ing, though rather compromising, use of this mechanical camera. With such an instrument all the handsomest women at a soiree might be photographed without their knowledge, and galleries of beauties be at any one's command. Let it be hoped, however, that this camera, if it is to be used, will only be employed for thieves and rascals. That it is perfectly possible to take such in- stantaneous pictures, without a person knowing it, admits of no reasonable doubt.

Here is something from the London Sanitary Record which ought to be re- membered by people who are engaged in the work of renovating their dwell- ings. It is not improbable that many cases of mysterious illness, and even of death, may be attributable to the cause indicated or something similar. Danger often lurks under very simple disguises: Many people have noticed the dis- agreeable odor proceeding from the size and paste of paper-hanging pervading an apartment for some time after the paper has been newly hung. M. Vallin, in the Revue d'Hygiene, reports an in- teresting case which has induced him to make some inquiries in this matter. A lady who from time to time came to town to supervise the decoration of her house was three times successively seized with violent sickness and head- ache after sleeping in a newly papered room. M. Vallin was struck with the putrefactive odor which pervaded the atmosphere, and after examining into the matter, came to the conclusion that it pro- ceeded from the wall. It was found that a horrible putrefactive odor pro- ceeded from the size-pot, with which the paper-hanger in the next room was continuing to hang the wall paper, and that this size was in a state of putrefac- tive change. On making further in- quires, various other cases have come under his notice in which illness has palpably been produced by the use, by paper-hangers, of size and paste under- going or speedily entering on septic change; and it is extremely desirable that this should be borne in mind, and, if necessary, a little oil of cloves and cylic acid, or some other an- tiseptic agent should be added to the material which they use for this purpose, or, at any rate, care should be taken to avoid these disagreeable consequences of carelessness which are only too com- mon.

Anise is an annual plant growing to the height of one foot, carries a white flower, and blooms from June till August. The seeds are imported and used in large quantities on account of their aromatic and carminative prop- erties. The distilled plant, when used in blossom, yields a sweeter and more grateful tincture than can be obtained from the seeds. Anise is extensively employed by the confectioner for the purpose of flavoring comfits and cor- dials. The anise-seed cordial of the shops is a compound of alcohol, anise- seed and angelica. The oil is obtained by distillation from the seeds, and though habitually mixed with a great many cattle medicines, and regarded by the farmers of former generations as one of the most potent of drugs, it performs scarcely any other office than the com- municating of an agreeable fragrance. The Chinese cultivate it for the season- ing of dishes; and the Japanese employ bundles and garlands of it in the cere- monies of their heathenish superstition. Its appearance, when out of flower, as well as when in bloom, is decidedly ornamental.

Mother's Clock.

A youth sat on a sofa wide,
Within a parlor dim;
The maid who lingered by his side
Was all the world to him.
What brought that glad light to his eye—
That cadence to his tone?
Why burns the lamp of love so high,
Though midnight's hour hath flown?
The clock above the glowing grate
Has stopped at half-past ten;
And, long as that young man may wait,
It will not strike again.
The artful maiden knows full well
What makes the clock act so,
And why no earthly power can tell
The time for him to go.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

Thermometers reform late in life; they never become "temperate" until nearly sixty.

"How to train 'students,'" is the sub- ject of an agricultural disquisition. It is easy enough. All you have to do is to let a tomato misbehave itself in company, to crush the stuff in out of it. It may look a little seedy for a while after, but this course of training will bring it to its pulp in a hurry.

"What," said a teacher, "is that in- vincible power that prevents the wicked man from sleeping and causes him to toss about upon his pillow, and what should he do to enjoy that peace which passeth all understanding?" "Sew up the hole in the mosquito-bar," was the prompt answer from the bad boy at the foot of the class.

An Editor's Debts.

In the years ago, when De Witt, Clinton county, was the county seat and a right smart village in the woods, or on the way to be, the editor of its weekly paper had some subscribers who paid in wood, others in produce, others in fur, and others yet who didn't pay at all. One of these latter class was named Lemon, but to squeeze anything out of him was next to impossible. He had excused at his tongue's end for not pay- ing, and the longer the debt stood the more reasonable his excuses seemed to his creditors. One day the editor met him on the street, and after a general greeting began on him with:

"Mr. Lemon, you have been owing me for two years."

"Yes, but I had bad luck in my sug- gar-bush."

"But you might have brought wood."

"So I should, but I broke two new axes and couldn't buy another."

"I offered to take it out in turnips and corn."

"I know, but the crows ate my corn up and the Injuns stole all my turnips."

"Well, how are you getting along now?" asked the editor.

"First-rate."

"Have you a good run of sugar?"

"Yes."

"Corn doing well?"

"Splendid."

"Wheat all right?"

"Yes, all right."

"Well, if corn, wheat, potatoes and turnips turn out good, and you keep well, and you have no losses, will you pay me in the fall?"

The farmer scratched his head and took a full minute to think over it before he replied:

"That's an honest debt and order be paid, but I won't positively agree to square up this fall until I know what sort of a corn season we are to have!"

It is needless to say that he never squared.—Detroit Free Press.

DECORATION DAY.—1881.

How Arlington Observed the Day.

Every thing that is beautiful and attractive in nature,—clear sky, bright sunlight, cool breezes, fresh green foliage, beautiful and fragrant blossoms,—all these combined to make Memorial Day, 1881, one of rare beauty and great enjoyment to all who participated in its exercises or enjoyed the military and civic parade, not only here in Arlington, but throughout the state, where the day was more generally observed than ever before since the service was inaugurated.

All the morning there was a hum of busy activity at the cemeteries, where loving hands were actively engaged in adorning these gardens of the dead with evidences that the absent were not forgotten, and at Town Hall, Reynolds Hall and at Wm. Penn. House, others were engaged in preparation for the afternoon display. The Arlington Veteran Association met at Reynolds Hall, and about two o'clock marched down the Avenue, through Franklin street, to Broadway, where Chief Engineer Charles Gott and 1st Asst. G. A. Stearns, with Wm. Penn. House Co., were in waiting. Here the procession was formed, Chief Marshal Wilson W. Fay assumed command, and the line marched directly to Town Hall, already filled with a waiting company, where the exercises were promptly opened with "Keller's American Hymn," finely and powerfully rendered by a chorus of mixed voices, under direction of Prof. S. P. Prentiss, Mr. Wm. E. Wood presiding at the piano. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. F. Potter, and then the chorus rendered "March of the Men of Harlech" with splendid effect. John H. Hardy, Esq., chosen to preside over the exercises in the hall, made a brief opening address, referring to the proud part this section bore in revolutionary times; its patriotic efforts in the late war; its appreciation of the observance of Decoration Day; the brave officers and men who gave their lives in the cause of freedom and others who have more lately followed on. "Festival Hymn," with happy musical effects, was afterwards rendered by the choir, at the conclusion of which Mr. Hardy introduced the orator of the day, Capt. William Spaulding, of Wakefield, whose address proved to be a most interesting sketch of the objects and aims of the Grand Army of the Republic. He said it knows no rank or station, its only requirements for membership being an honorable discharge from any branch of the U. S. service. He defended it against the charge of being political in its purpose; showed why, though it must be confined to those who fought on the side of the Union, it was not sectional in its feelings; and by a recital of some of its noble deeds illustrated how worthy it was of a place in the warmest affection of the people of the land, and that the men who fought the battles and won the victories of the late war are worthy the gratitude and reverence of a great nation.

Portions of the oration, especially where noted engagements were mentioned, or favorite names pronounced, were liberally applauded, and a good share of enthusiasm was awakened; but it was too long, and the speaker suffered much interruption by people retiring in consequence of its undue length.

After singing "America," in which the audience joined, Rev. W. F. Potter pronounced the benediction, and the exercises were over. As the comrades passed from the hall, each was headed a bouquet of flowers (wreaths of immortals had been previously distributed) and the line was speedily formed in front of Town Hall, and marched up Arlington Avenue in the following order:—

Police Officers.—John H. Hartwell, Chief.
WILSON W. FAY.....CHIEF MARSHAL.

Selectmen, Orator,
Town Clerk.

The route of procession was up the Avenue to Schouler court; counter-march to Academy street; through

Academy and Maple to Pleasant, and up Pleasant to the residence of J. T. Thowbridge, Esq.; counter-march to the old Cemetery. Here the floral tributes were placed on the graves (already marked by flags) of the following comrades:—

Rev. Samuel A. Smith, A. O. W. Cutter, Albert Frost, Geo. D. Cotting. After music by the band the procession passed on to Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, by way of Mystic street, and there the ceremony of the decoration was completed by strewing flowers on the sod above the remains of those whose faces and forms will be recalled by these familiar names:—

Rev. J. Lewis Merrill, C. Howard Jones, John Locke, Charles J. Moore, Samuel Gates, S. G. Rawson, James Gibson, G. D. Trask, J. Minot Robbins, Henry S. Pollard, Charles G. Haskell, John Grant, William Stacy, George H. Sprague, Thomas Martin, Franklin Ford, Nathaniel White, William W. Snelling, Edward D. Clark, Henry W. Whittemore, Charles Henry and James Ferguson.

The first two mentioned in this list, comrades Merrill and Jones, have died since last Memorial Day, and their graves were specially remembered. The cross used at the Universalist church, last Sunday, was among the special adornments of Mr. Merrill's grave, and a very large bouquet was made of the flowers contributed, especially for the grave of the first Adjutant of the Association, C. Howard Jones.

The procession returned to the hall by way of Medford street, instead of the advertised route, greatly to the disappointment of some who had taken special pains to decorate; and because of this change the Association "escaped" a generous quantity of lemonade, prepared for their refreshment by Mr. Samuel G. Damon. In front of Town Hall, the routine of "dress parade" was gone through with, officers and men alike acquitting themselves with credit, and then the parade was dismissed.

The fire company returned to their own hall, where, after partaking of Mr. Damon's generous donation of lemonade, they dismissed. The Veteran Association repaired to Reynolds Hall, where a simple but generous collation had been spread at the expense of the Chief Marshal, W. W. Fay, and after all had been served, Commander E. F. Kenrick, as master of ceremonies, introduced Hon. Oliver Warner, who made a stirring speech and awakened much enthusiasm by referring to the well-remembered time when John A. Andrew was Governor of Massachusetts, and the incidents of those five years so familiar to all. Chief Marshal Fay acknowledged the compliment of "three cheers and a tiger," and was followed by Col. Alfred Norton, in an eloquent and patriotic address. Brief remarks were made by others, a song, in which all joined in the chorus, was given by comrade Bailey and the comrades separated with singing "Auld Lang Syne."

No stronger proof of the growing favor with which this day is regarded can be found than is evidenced by our own town, until within three years entirely unused to its observance, but now thoroughly awake to its importance and anxious to make the most of it in every way. So is it throughout the whole country. Instead of passing through a gradual decadence toward oblivion, as has been so often predicted, the observance of Memorial Day has crystallized into an institution, whose hold upon the popular thought and feeling grows stronger rather than weaker, as the years go by. The prayer of the central character in one of Dickens' Christmas stories, "Lord keep my memory green!" finds its fulfillment as regards the patriot dead who gave up their lives for country and liberty. Their memory is still green, and will continue so; and although the ranks of surviving comrades grow thinner each year, there will be those who will take up the grateful and tender task, and perpetuate the sacred memories of the day.

We ought not to close our report of this day's festivities without speaking of the effectiveness of the vocal music, which was so generally remarked. The choir certainly deserves much praise. Their skill, precision and attention to the director was a silent tribute to Mr. Prentiss' abilities as a teacher and director, and none will dispute the award of chief praise to him. We know that the Association, and friends generally, appreciate his efforts, and heartily thank him, the chorus under his charge, and Mr. Wm. E. Wood for his accompaniments.

Memorial Service.

An interesting, instructive and appropriate service was held in the Universalist church, last Sunday forenoon, it being the first time that the now very common practice of holding a special memorial service on the Sunday before Decoration Day, in some church, was observed in town. The invitation came to the Arlington Veteran Association from Rev. W. F. Potter, pastor of the church, and was most heartily accepted. The Association, to the number of about thirty, met in Reynolds Hall, marched to the church under command of its officers, and was assigned seats in front, at the right of the pulpit. The service opened with most excellent organ selection by Mr. Geo. H. Thayer, and then the male quartette of the church, Messrs. Cutter, Poole, Pattee, Parrie, rendered the opening anthem. Mr. Potter chose as the subject of his discourse the "Christian Soldier," taking his text from 1st Timothy, 18, "War a good warfare." We regret our inability to give a lengthy report of this sermon,—certainly a noble effort to turn the thoughts of his hearers to the true aims and purposes of life.

He, in opening, referred to the call there is for attention to the duties of daily life,—those little trials and temptations,—overcoming which the man proves himself a good soldier, and said the special value of Decoration Day to the present generation is its power of keeping before all the characteristics of a good soldier;—for our soldiers were good citizens and noble men,—the struggle in which they were engaged was one of those steps which hasten the time when all shall acknowledge God to be the Lord.

The speaker then took up the attributes of the true soldier. True courage is coolness and calmness. Rage does not betoken courage, though it may make a man rush into danger, and bravery, so often taken for true courage, may be the outcome of sheer obstinacy. True courage is ever blended with meekness,—has nothing of that spirit so common in church, family, party and nation, that will ruin if it cannot rule. To illustrate his idea of courage, he read, with fine effect, the story of the Union soldier carrying water to the wounded rebels in front of the line, in the very face of death.

He next referred to endurance. It is not so much the brilliant assault, before which the enemy falls back dismayed, as the patient endurance to the end which accomplishes the victory. As with the late rebellion, it is only after the magnitude of the struggle is realized that we begin to talk of "enduring for the war." The true soldier must have faith in his cause,—he must have confidence in himself. The man who is fully lost is he who has lost faith in himself, in his ability to move forward to share in the victory. Lastly, he must have confidence in his leader. Our Captain has made the plan,—it cannot fail. Our Leader commands us to go forward, and himself leads the way. He assures us of victory,—He makes no mistakes.

A large floral cross stood in front of the pulpit, and there were also handsome baskets of flowers on the platform. The attendance was good, though a slight rain just at the hour of service doubtless detained many.

The Lightning and its Freaks.

Just at early evening, on Decoration Day, the sky at the northward presented that appearance which betokens heavy showers. Soon after the darkness gave place to that peculiar brassy or bell-metal look, which so often precedes the fierce tornado or hurricane in the tropics. Before eight o'clock a heavy rain set in, accompanied by an almost terrific discharge of lightning and continuous roar of thunder. No damage was sustained in Lexington, but Arlington "got it bad." About half past eight o'clock the large double house, off Broadway, occupied by Messrs. Abel R. Proctor and C. H. Wharton, was struck, and about the same time the house of Mr. Alfred Brooks, opposite St. Malachy church, on Medford St., was also visited. At Mr. Proctor's the fluid struck one corner of the tin roof extension and entered the chamber on the second floor near a window, tearing off casings, plastering, etc., breaking glass, destroying screens, and doing other damage. It also entered the front room on the same floor and inflicting still greater damage to the windows, casings, etc. About an equal amount of damage was sustained in Mr. Wharton's part, and the fluid made its exit nearly opposite where it entered, but on the lower floor. No person was injured, all being in the lower part of the house, and it was not at first known the house had been struck. Some time afterwards, fire was discovered between the partitions in the rear of the house, and an alarm was sounded. The firemen rallied, tore off some clapboards, and poured in water by means of the garden hose and extinguished it. The damage, though scattered over so large a space, is slight, probably not exceeding $100. The damage at Mr. Brooks' house is a mere trifle, confined to the chimney, window curtain and a piece of finish near the sink in the kitchen. The most curious freak of all was the bursting of the water pipes on Franklin street, at equal distance each way from the hydrant, showing it to have received a heavy shock of electricity. The breakage was sufficient to relieve the hydrants of all force, and oblige the closing of the Broadway gate.

Please Lend Me Your Paper.

Few borrowers of papers imagine they are members of a class,—persons who are in the habit of buying their own paper do not think, perhaps, that there is such a class. Publishers of country newspapers know there is, and that in most communities its numbers are large. Did its membership embrace those who were really anxious to learn and were too poor to pay for education; were it composed of those who speak kindly of what pleases them in their borrowed papers, publishers and lenders alike would feel less like complaining. But generally "the paper is not worth taking," or they "only want to look at one item," and yet while it is still moist from the press they will send to borrow it and keep it long enough—sometimes days—to read it through, advertisements and all. No one need to borrow another's paper, the cost is so trifling. It is a wrong to the subscriber and an injury to the publisher, but a still larger one to the newspaper borrower, who may thus easily become the most thoroughly unwellcome person in any community,—the perpetual borrower. If any paper is not worth subscribing for or buying, it is not worth borrowing, except on the rarest occasions and for the most definite purpose.

Arlington Boat Club Notes.

The "Glass Ball Club" is now in trim for the season, and members have entered upon the contests for the prizes (first and second class) offered by the Club. These prizes are very neat silver badges, appropriately engraved, and were procured by Mr. Geo. T. Freeman, of Harrington & Freeman, well-known jewellers at 59 Court St., Boston. They can be seen at Whittemore's drug store. The first contest took place on Decoration Day, under the newly printed rules of the Club, at their grounds near the Cemetery. Messrs. Amidon and Jewett led in the first class, breaking 17 out of 20. Addison Sawyer was first in the second class, securing 18 out of 20, and Messrs. Whittemore and Swan came next, with 15 each. The contest covers five matches during the season.

During the past winter Mr. William Proctor has occupied some of his leisure in building a "working model" of his trim little yacht, for the use of his son, and last week he placed in Spy Pond one of the neatest little affairs ever seen. The miniature craft is a perfect copy of the larger boat, in all its finishings and furnishings, but is only 8 feet long and 4 feet wide. It carries a "leg of mutton" sail.

A boat race on Monday was talked of, but it fell through. Messrs. Hesselbine and Hill entered for a canoe race from Club House around the island and return. In the rear of the island both were "played out," and laid to until they recovered. Then a fresh start was made, and Hesselbine was the winner. The peculiarities of the contest, especially, the "rest," made much fun.

Most of the sailing boats are now ready for the season, though not all of them have been launched.

The Club meet next Monday evening—regular meeting—when some arrangements will probably be made for a regatta on the 17th of June.

The season now opening will be doubtless full of enjoyment to the Club, and in most of their sports the general public will take a lively interest.

CLIPPINGS AND NOTES.

—The picnic season has come.
—Venner said "cold and wet."
—The hay crop promises to be remarkably heavy.
—Boston Tea Store takes the lead with groceries.
—The cold of last spring nearly annihilated the canker worms.
—The law is that no person shall sell liquor without a license.
—Francis Gould Post 38 mustered in two new recruits, Thursday evening.

—No change in the price of flour this week at Boston Tea Store.

—Buy lumber of George W. Gale, 69 Main St., Cambridgeport—formerly Gale & Wood.

—Chief of Police Hartwell has been sick this week—took cold at the fire, last Monday evening.

—The proposed excursion of the Lexington Field and Garden Club may be delayed until after the 18th inst.

—Fifteen applicants for houses at this office the past week, and not even a tenement to supply the demand.

—Mrs. Chapman, next to the hotel, keeps excellent ice cream, by the plate or larger quantity.

—R. W. Shattuck purchased the half interest in the Patee estate in Arlington, offered at auction last Tuesday afternoon.

—The space given this week to "Decoration Day" prevents our continuing "Our Home Industries" this week. More are to follow.

—The Governor and Council have voted to commute the sentence of Stearns K. Abbott from death to imprisonment for life.

—The regular meeting of the Arlington W. C. T. Union occurs next Friday afternoon, (June 10) at 3 o'clock, at the Congregational church vestry.

—The regular or fortnightly entertainment at the Lexington Baptist church occurs this evening. A very fine program will be presented. Miss Baker, of Boston, it is to be one of the readers. The public is invited.

—Mr. Frederick Lemme contributed fifty elegant bouquets to the Boston hospital, last Tuesday morning. They were clipped from his green houses on the Peck estate and were models of elegance and beauty.

—The Arlington Branch of the Flower Mission commenced operations Thursday morning, by sending to Boston fifty bouquets. We hope all who have flowers to spare will send them to the Unitarian church, each Thursday morning.

—The second world's fair meeting was held at Hotel Vendome, Wednesday evening. It showed two things; first, that the sold men of Boston, without any announced exceptions, were personally favorable to the world's fair here in 1885, and, secondly, that they mean to build only so fast and so far as they can build securely.

—Menotomy Bicycle Club joined in the grand parade in Boston, Decoration Day, being assigned second position in the second division, under command of Capt. W. E. Parmenter, Jr., and Lt. F. Y. Wellington. Their uniform—jacket, knickerbockers and caps,—dark blue with light cord, is very neat indeed. Few better riders were in line.

—Valley Field Farm, at Lexington, was offered for sale last Tuesday. It was "knocked down" to Mr. Joseph Richardson, for $10,000, but as he did not comply with the terms, there was no sale. About $6,000 worth of personal property was sold, and brought good prices. Twenty head of young cattle are retained on the farm.

—The Governor has designated Edward S. Cheshbrough, of Chicago, Ill.; Henry P. Wolcott, of Cambridge, Charles F. Folsom and Dr. Azel Ames, Jr., of Wakefield, to act under the resolve passed by the Legislature of this year by which it is provided that there may be reported by the Governor and council to the next General Court a comprehensive plan for drainage of the Mystic Valley and other adjacent sections of the city of Boston.

"Wedding Bells are Ringing."

A happy company filled the parlor at the residence of Jacob F. Hobbs, Esq., on Arlington Avenue, last Wednesday evening, to witness the ceremony uniting his only daughter in marriage with Mr. J. W. Moore. The bride was dressed in elegant lilac silk, with satin trimmings. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. F. Potter, in a pleasing and impressive manner. After the ceremony and the usual congratulations, the company repaired to the supper room, where caterer Crawford, of Boston, had spread the wedding feast. The wedding gifts were numerous and elegant. The young couple started in life under most happy auspices, with the best wishes of all, in which we heartily join.

Another similar and equally interesting event occurred Thursday evening, at the residence of Gen. W. Lane, Esq., Pleasant street, Arlington, at which Rev. W. J. Parrot officiated, the particulars of which will be found under the marriage heading.

The residence of Hon. B. T. Batchelder, Lexington, was the scene of a quiet but happy family party, last Wednesday forenoon, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Lizzie M. (the youngest daughter) to Mr. Henry E. Uram, of Providence, R. I. The array of wedding gifts were remarkably elegant and profuse, showing a wide circle of friends. The young couple left by the noon train on a short wedding tour, and on their return will reside in Lexington for the summer. Mr. Uram is in business with Mr. Frank E. Wetherell (so well known as a former Lexington resident and editor of the Minute-man), at Providence.

Observance of Decoration Day.

A friend who spent the day in New York handed us a bunch of New York papers, Tuesday evening, and a short note, in which he speaks of the parade in that great city. He says: "I wish I had time and space to picture to you the magnitude of the display made in New York on Decoration Day. The procession was two and one-fourth hours passing a given point, and embraced twenty-four wagons, with from one to four horses each, loaded with flowers of every kind and design. One furnished by G. A. R. Post 83, represented a lot in a cemetery, with its green grass, little mounds to represent graves, miniature floral monument in the centre, and with the motto, wrought with flowers, 'They died that the nation might live,'—the whole drawn by four black horses. It was really a splendid sight. The weather was very warm, and the military suffered much from the heat. I came away impressed with the feeling that the soldiers who sacrificed their lives that a nation might live are not forgotten in the metropolis of the nation."

Telephonic Communication.

The Telephone line running through Bedford, Lexington, Arlington, and other towns between Boston and Lowell, was put up by the Pioneer Telephone Company, in 1879. The business was a complete financial success from the outset, and now they are contemplating a great increase, which will embrace the addition of five new wires, and will include the opening of local offices in Arlington, Lexington and other places along the line. The advantages of this connection, with a low tariff of prices, are too apparent to need naming, and we certainly hope the energetic managers of the "Pioneer Company" will meet with ample encouragement in the towns and cities along the line.

Police Court.

Last Saturday night, about eleven o'clock, officers Shean and Barry had occasion to arrest John McLaughlin and George Sullivan, both being under the influence of liquor. Both were released on bail Sunday morning. Tuesday afternoon they were brought before Trial Justice John H. Hardy, and fined $1.00, without costs. At the same time complaint was made against both for assault on officer Shean. On this they waived examination and were held in $200 each for a hearing at 7 o'clock on the evening of June 3. Both gave ample evidence that liquor is sold in town, and where it was sold. We suggest that the police devote themselves to these law breakers, while not allowing the more open and noisy violators to escape.

SUNDAY SERVICES, JUNE 5.

Preaching service at the Baptist church at 10.30 o'clock; Sunday School in the vestry at 11.45, a. m. Evening service, at 7 o'clock, in the vestry.

Rev. W. J. Parrot will occupy his own pulpit at the Unitarian church, and will address his hearers with "Some thoughts regarding the late revision or the New Testament."

At the Universalist church the services will be conducted by Rev. D. L. R. Libby, of Medford.

Rev. Oliver S. Dean, of Milton, Mass., a leading preacher in the denomination, will occupy the pulpit at the Congregational church, on Pleasant street.

At the St. John's (Episcopal) church, Holy Communion will be administered, at 8.30, P. M.; Sunday School at 8, P. M.; Evening service at 7.30, P. M., by the Rector, assisted by the choir from Grace church, Medford. A collection will be taken, the proceeds to be used towards the formation of an Organ Fund.

—Friday morning Mr. C. M. Parker's horse ran away with his milk wagon, struck and broke the post in front of Dr. Holmes' house, upset the wagon, spilled the milk cans, ran off with the front wheels and created confusion generally near the centre of Lexington.

Marriages.

In Lexington, June 1, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, Mr. Henry E. Uram, of Providence, R. I., and Miss Lizzie M., youngest daughter of Hon. B. T. Batchelder, of Lexington. [No cards.]

In Arlington, June 1, at residence of bride's father, by Rev. W. F. Potter, Mr. J. W. Moore and Miss Florence, daughter of Jacob F. Hobbs, Esq., all of Arlington. [Thanks for a most generous slice of the wedding loaf.]

In Arlington, June 2, by Rev. W. J. Parrot, Mr. Joseph L. Robinson, of Boston, and Miss Georgie E. Sherman, of Arlington.

VOTE OF THANKS.

ARLINGTON, June 3d, 1881.

At a meeting of the Arlington Veteran Association, held Thursday evening, on motion of James A. Marden, chairman of Executive Committee, it was unanimously

Resolved,—That the thanks of the Arlington Veteran Association be extended to the engineers of the Arlington Fire Department and Wm. Penn. House Co., who acted as escort; to Wm. H. Thomas and the efficient drum corps under his charge; to Mr. S. P. Prentiss, director and instructor, the ladies and gentlemen comprising the choir, and Mr. W. E. Wood, accompanist for music in the hall; to the ladies who made the contributions of flowers, into wreaths and bouquets; to the generous contributors of the same; for courtesies extended by the Universalist Society, through its pastor, Rev. W. F. Potter, to any and all who in any way aided in making the parade on Decoration Day so signal a success.

Resolved,—That the foregoing be published in the Arlington Advocate.

Per order of Association.

E. F. KENRICK, Commander.

East and Middle.

COLONEL THOMAS A. SCOTT, ex-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, died at his country house in Delaware county, Pa., a few days since, aged fifty-seven years. Colonel Scott was born in Loudon, Franklin county, Pa., December 28, 1824. He received his education in the village school of that place. When ten years of age he went to work in a country store near Waynesboro, and was afterward employed as a clerk in stores in Bridgeport and Mercersburg until about 1841. In 1847 he left this position and went to Philadelphia. His connection with State improvements continued until 1850, in which year he entered the regular service of the Pennsylvania railroad company. In the early part of the civil war Colonel Scott was for a time assistant secretary of war. When the death of the late J. Edgar Thompson, on the 25th of May, 1874, made vacant the highest office in the company, Colonel Scott was elected to succeed Mr. Thompson. Colonel Scott early became interested in the development of the Southwest, and took an active part in the establishment of the Texas and Pacific railroad. His close application to business and the want of relaxation so affected his health that he was ordered by his physician to take a foreign tour. He returned to his home, however, a paralytic, and the shattered system declined by degrees to the point of death. He was for a long time one of the best known railroad men in the United States.

The faculty of Phillips academy at Exeter, N. H., has expelled seven students and suspended three for engaging in a mock serenade of some of the instructors.

ROBERT BERT and C. H. Dewees, engineer and fireman of a passenger train on the Boston and Albany road, were killed in a collision near Ghent, N. Y.

The assessed valuation of real estate in New Jersey, according to the census, is $436,032,638, and of personal property, $126,215,985. The total State indebtedness is $53,828,247.

A DETACHMENT of soldiers captured the three murderers of Lieutenant Cherry near Fort Tetter, Dakota. They had attacked a ranch ten miles from that fort and shot a man named John Bardeux and wounded another, and when pursued by soldiers shot and killed Lieutenant Cherry and seriously wounded a private. First reports that Lieutenant Cherry had been shot by one of his own men proved erroneous.

LEBOY and Potter, Colorado murderers, were lynched at Del Norte.

A STEAM sawmill four miles west of Oakland, Md., was blown to atoms by the explosion of the boiler. Marshall Butler, the fireman, was blown a distance of 800 or 700 feet, and was instantly killed. William Browning was caught under falling timbers and seriously injured. Eight or ten other persons were slightly injured.

At Anna, Ill., Robert S. Reynolds, a wealthy farmer, was killed by his son with a boulder. The deceased was seventy years old, and only a year ago shot and killed a man named Frazier.

By an explosion of fifteen barrels of Danforth's fluid, stored in a cellar in St. Joseph, Mo., a low drinking saloon overhead was blown to atoms, and of the twenty or thirty negroes in the place at the time four were killed, several were injured and two reported missing.

Two men were killed and three were badly hurt by the explosion of the boiler in a Memphis (Tenn.) foundry. The cylinder of the engine was blown over the county jail and through a brick wall a hundred yards distant.

THE Russian revolutionists have answered the czar's manifesto by a second utterance, dwelling on the wretchedness of the peasants, the deportations to Siberia, the gagging of free speech and public journals, and declaring that false counselors are in possession of the czar's ear. The document concludes as follows: "Let your majesty assemble your people around you and listen to their wishes in an unprejudiced spirit, and then neither your majesty nor the state will have any reason to apprehend further catastrophe."

Mrs. BRENNAN, secretary of the Irish land league, has been arrested under the provisions of the coercion act.

THE shore end of the new Atlantic cable—the first and only one owned by American capitalists—was landed at Dover bay, Nova Scotia, and is being put down from the steamer Faraday at the rate of 130 miles a day. The steamer also has the eastern shore end of the cable on board, and if the weather is pleasant will put it down on her way to London.

THE Swedish government is becoming alarmed and contemplates legislation in view of the emigration, which is assuming the proportions of an exodus. Several counties are practically denuded of able-bodied inhabitants.

At 6 o'clock p. m. the steamer Victoria, with over 600 people on board, was returning to London, Ontario, from an excursion to Spring Bank, and when one mile below the city the boat suddenly collapsed, like an egg shell, and became a total wreck level with the water's edge. All the passengers were instantly plunged into the stream, more than half of them being underneath the debris. The first news of the disaster which reached the city was brought by survivors who struggled through the streets, wet and weary. The news fell like a thunderbolt, and a stampede took place from London for the spot. Arriving there a horrible sight met the people's view. Fifty or sixty bodies had already been recovered, and were lying on the green sward some distance up the bank. Those arriving from the city from every direction crowded around anxiously to see if any relatives were on board. About 1,000 families were represented on the excursion, and the wail of anguish that arose at the sight of the victims was heartrending. Fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters rushed about panic-stricken endeavoring to identify friends. By 7 o'clock about eighty bodies were recovered from under the wreck. Almost every minute some victim was brought to the surface and conveyed to the bank. The steamer Princess Louise was early brought to the spot and the victims were placed on the upper decks. Fires were lighted on the bank overlooking the river, petroleum torches were brought, and the search was continued until night, by which time about 150 corpses had been recovered.

A Lively Donkey.

There is a hostler in a livery stable at Easton, Pa., that will remember Tony Denier's donkey for some time to come. The stalls were all full when the company arrived, and the day hostler placed the little animal in the harness-room and forgot to tell John, the night hostler, about it when he came on duty. About 3 o'clock in the morning John went into the harness-room on an errand, without taking a lantern along, and stepped on the hind foot of the donkey, which was lying down. The Turk awoke, and there was a sound of revelry by night, though just what took place will never be quite clear, as the donkey can't tell and the hostler won't. But for an hour or more John was busy putting horse liniment on his shins, and no doubt it was one of those instances where the donkey seemed to stutter with his hind feet.—Mitwaukee Sun.

A Valuable Secret.

It is related of Franklin that from the window of his office in Philadelphia he noticed a mechanic, among a number of others, at work on a house which was being erected close by, who always appeared to be in a merry humor, and who had a kind and cheerful smile for every one he met. Let the day be ever so cold, gloomy or sunless, the happy smile danced like a sunbeam on his cheerful countenance. Meeting him one day Franklin requested to know the secret of his constant happy flow of spirits.

"It's no secret, doctor," the man replied. "I've got one of the best of wives, and when I go to work she always gives me a kind word of encouragement and a blessing with her parting kiss; and when I go home she is sure to meet me with a smile and a kiss of welcome; and then tea is sure to be ready; and as we chat in the evening, I find she has been doing so many little things through the day to please me, that I cannot find it in my heart to speak an unkind word or give an unkind look to anybody."

And Franklin adds: "What an influence, then, hath woman over the heart of man, to soften it, and make it the fountain of cheerful and pure emotions. Speak gently, then. A happy smile and a kind word of greeting after the toils of the day are over cost nothing, and go far toward making home happy and peaceful."

How to Clean Chromos.

When you clean them use a soft feather brush, or wipe them with a soft cambric skin (a drop of oil may restore clearness), or with a fine linen rag very slightly dampened. Always tenderly. Next, whenever the original varnish coating is dulled, bruised or rubbed, revarnish it with thin, mastic varnish.

Chromos, like oil paintings, should not be hung in a dark room, but in one with diffused light; and never exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The chromos after water colors keep and display better when placed under glass, as they lack the protecting cover of the varnish. The large chromos after oil paintings display, as a general thing, best when framed like original paintings. It is not necessary to put any of these under a glass, it is a matter of taste—preserving them, at the same time, from dust and rough handling.

(Rockford (Ill.) Register.)

Fell Against a Sharp Edge. This is furnished by Mr. Wm. Will, 1613 Frankford ave., Philadelphia, Pa.: Some time since I received a severe injury to my back, by falling against the sharp edge of a marble step, the stone penetrating it at least a half-inch, and leaving a very painful wound. After suffering for a time I concluded to apply St. Jacobs Oil, and am pleased to say that the results exceeded my expectations. It speedily allayed all pain and swelling, and by continued use made a perfect cure. I really think it the most efficacious liniment I ever used.

(Chambersburg (Pa.) Herald.)

After vainly spending five hundred dollars for other remedies to relieve my wife, I have no hesitation in declaring that St. Jacobs Oil will cure Neuralgia, says M. V. B. Hersom, Esq., (of Pinkham & Hersom), Boston, Mass., an enthusiastic indorse of its merits.

In Portugal a widow cannot marry if she be over fifty years of age. Who ever heard of a widow as old as that?

"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did them no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it. A Workman."

"Amantha," he murmured, with pathos in his voice, "why do you quiver at my touch? Why do you shrink from my embrace as the startled fawn trembles at the rustling of the autumn leaves?" "I've been vaccinated," she said.

Something Almost Marvelous. Is the steadily increasing power and popularity of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

AND NEVER FAILED

To CURE Croup, Spasms, Diarrhoea, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, and all the ailments of children, take SCOTT'S SERRA-PAPILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP, perfectly harmless; also externally, Cuts, Bruises, Chronic Rheumatism, Old Sores, Pains in the limbs, back and chest. Such a remedy is Dr. T. J. B. VETTER'S LINIMENT.

Put no one else's trial will ever be without it, over 600 physicians use it.

A Standard Article Everywhere. It is a long way from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico, but in all the vast area lying within those bounds there is not a city, town, village, settlement or camp where HOPBITTERS'S Bitters is not well known and in great demand. It is the great household medicine of the American people, and is taken everywhere as a safeguard against epidemics and endemic diseases, as a remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness and irregularities of the bowels, as a cure for chills and fever and rheumatic ailments, as a sedative in nervous cases, as a wholesome exhilarant in hypochondria, and as a general invigorant and restorative. To the weak and drooping it imparts strength and vitality, bracing the relaxed nerves and rousing all the latent energies of the system. For years it has been the standard tonic and corrective of the western world.

For neuralgia in the face or acute suffering elsewhere, cut a thick slice of bread all across the loaf—fresh bread is best. Soak one side for a minute in boiling water, and rapidly sprinkle cayenne pepper over the hot side. Apply while still smoking hot.

Feels Young Again. "My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy inactive condition of the whole system, headache, nervous prostration and was almost helpless. No physician or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, in Providence, R. I.

To keep on repenting for past sins is easy enough. It is the beginning to do better that is difficult.

FROM B. F. LIEPNER, A. M., Red Bank, N. J.: "Ely's Cream Balm Co., Owego, N. Y.: Gents: I have been troubled with Catarrh so badly for several years that it seriously affected my voice. I tried Dr. ——— remedy without obtaining the good effect that I sought. I then used your Cream Balm, and after only a few days my voice is fully restored, and my head feels better than it has for years. I feel deeply indebted to you. Very truly, B. F. Liepner. January 28, 1881."

"My son tried Ely's Cream Balm for cold in the head. After using it twice he felt no more distress or trouble in breathing. I recommend it above all other Catarrh remedies. It sells well with me. C. CURED SCROFULA.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 18, 1877. H. R. STEVENSON, Dear Sir:—I can cheerfully recommend your VEGETINE as the "Great Blood Purifier." I have been afflicted with Scrofula for years, and was cured by your VEGETINE. I keep it constantly on hand to keep my bowels regular, and am constantly recommending it to all who I hear needing a remedy like yours. Truly yours,

JOHN McGETTIGAN. Being personally acquainted with Mr. McGettigan, I can vouch for him as being reliable in his statement, as I have said him before.

Remarkable Cure of Scrofulous Face.

WESTMINSTER, CONN., June 19, 1879. Mr. H. R. STEVENSON, Dear Sir:—I can testify to the good effect of your medicine. My little boy had a Scrofula sore break out on his head as large as a quarter of a dollar, and it went down his face from one ear to the other, under his neck, and was one solid mass of sores. Two bottles of your valuable VEGETINE completely cured him. Very respectfully,

Mrs. G. B. THATCHER.

Druggist's Report.
